BROADWAY THEATER.

"The Luck of MacGregor."

"The Luck of MacGregor," the play which Edward Vroom will present here on Jan, 9th, matines and night, at the Eroadway theater, is a superb military drama, depicting the story of a young Scotch-Irish officer of the British army, in love with an American girl, whose Cather is a natriot say.

whose father is a patriot spy.

The principal scenes of the play take place in an English garrison amid the xcitement and the humors of army life. The play does not deal with history. It is first and last a drama of love in the picturesque setting of a military camp in action.

The play will be staged with all the careful attention to details that have given Mr. Vroom his high standing as a producer. Mr. Vroom will be supported by a cast of New York actors, chosen for their special fitness.

"Forty-Five Minutes from Breadway." The personality of a play has a very great deal to do with the success of the individual as well as of the piece that is being offered. For instance, rethe George M. Cohan music-drama, "Forty-Five Minutes from Broadway," with Scott Weich in his famous character of "Kid Burns," the retired prize fighter, which Cohan & Harris will present at the Broadway theater to present at the Broadway theater to night, with Miss Frances Gordon, who plays the part of Mary, the maid, fits so well into the part that it would seem that the young playwright must have had her in mind when construct-ing this, his most successful, contribu-tion to the amusement catering stage. Her humor is so infectious and gets over the footlights so quickly that the most morose and woebegone faced pessimist has to relax his serious countsnance and with a smile add his mite of appreciation to her fun-making abiliappreciation to her fun-making abilities. With the man who has a chronically cheerful viewpoint her task is reduced to play rather than work, because her part is one that sparkles and scintillates from start to finish, as does the lines of those by whom she is surrounded. To make the world happier and merrier seems to have been one thing sought for by the author of "Forty-Five Minutes from Broadway."

and judging by the tremendous houses and judging by the tremendous houses that have greeted this since its first production three years ago he has suc-ceeded with practically all the theatergoers in the large cities to which the plece has been confined since that date.

"The Merry Widow."

The famous "Merry Widow" waitz which is to be danced when this worldfamous operatia is presented here on Tuesday, Jan. 12th, at the Broadway theater, has probably prevoked more comment than any other single feature of any theatrical production ever presented in this country or in Europe.

The waltz is danced in the second and by Sonia, the wealthy Marsovian widow, and Prince Danilo, her lover. They are both high spirited and capricious and full of that foolish stubbornness which symmetries mass with love when which sometimes goes with love when youth holds sway. The prince loves Sonia with all the ardor and passion of the Slav, has told/her, when piqued at some utterly irrevelant act, that he will never tell her of his love, nor does he until the very last moment of the operetta. The waitz may be said to be symbolic of Sonia's efforts to have him voice by word of mouth the melody of voice by word of mouth the melody of his soul.

The scene is laid in the summer garden of her home, on the evening of a festival which she has arranged for her countrymen. It is singularly illusive and almospheric setting, full of the witchery of the night. The air scenes heavy with the perfume of the roses which abound on every side. Into this scene comes Sonia and her lover. Their speech is full of querulous equivoks but underneath the mask of fitppancy it can be seen that each one is calling to the other.

Sonia tells the other.

Sonia tells the prince that she has decided to marry a Prenchman, and his almost boyish jealousy is a delight to witness. He promises that he will dance at her wedding and that he will do it light-heartedly.

"Then dance with me now," she challenges, as the orchestra breaks forth into a fantastic Hungarian selection full of crashing dissonences and throbbing with fire and passion. She dances alone for a moment and then he joins her. Together they dame side by side, but not touching, and where it is over her. Together they dame side by side, but not touching, and where it is over

The prince laughs mockingly when she asks him if he liked the dance, and hums the song which he has sung before, telling of his wish to go back to Maxim's, the rendezvous of Queen Wally.

She moves closer to him, and as she does so the soft, insinuating and intoxicating opening bars of the waits are played. She pauses in an attitude of challenge. He stands tremblingly deflant for an instant, moves a bit closer, and then, carried away by the passionate sweep and abandon of the music, he clasps her about the waist and they slowly move through the measures of the dance. They pause as the music stone for a moment.

measures of the dance. They pause as the music stops for a moment.

The opening bar of the waitz is again struck up. Moved by a common impulse, they spring into each other's arms again and wheel about the stage in a graceful abandon. This time she bends her body backward and as they dance he leans over her as if he fain would whisper the words he has swirm never to speak. And so they swing off the stage, only to be recalled again and again. For each encore a new and unconventional position is assumed.

Consul John N. Snodgrass writes from Kobe that for three years past there have been negotiations passing between China and Japan on account of the peculiar conditions in relation to telegraph lines near the Asiatic coast line, following the Russo-Japanese war, and that an agreement has been reached.
